The Growth Path

Vensure: Your services today

Where Cerity steps in

Contractors

Test a market with minimal commitment

EOR

Hire employees fast, no entity needed

Payroll and recruiting

Scale the team and keep it running

Own legal entity in new/existing market

Commit to the country for the long term

Without an entity setup and support partner at the last step, a growing client has a reason to look elsewhere.

EOR is the better first move, and we say so

Factors	EOR	Legal entity
Speed to first hire	Fast: employees can start without waiting for incorporation	Slower: Anywhere from 4-12 weeks normally, can be up to a year, depending on the country
Upfront work	None: no incorporation, registrations or bank account	Incorporation, tax and payroll registrations, local bank account
Ongoing cost and effort	Provider fee per employee; no entity administration	Accounting, tax filings and statutory compliance fees every year
Control	Provider is the employer of record	Company is the direct employer, with employment law and statutory liability
Best when	Testing a market, small teams, speed matters most	Strategic commitment to the country or a large local team

Both are right, at different stages. Our job is to help clients know when to switch.

What drives the need for an in-country presence?

As a business matures, an entity becomes the natural next step

Customers want a committed local presence:

- Local support
- Adaptation to language and culture
- Ability to contract locally, with tax and legal benefits

Development team

Engineers who need a permanent local base

Manufacturing

Production sites that hold assets and contracts locally

Customer support

Support centers with local staff and equipment

Warehouse and distribution

Hold inventory in-market and ship to customers

What drives the need for an in-country presence?

Direct hiring

Employees experience the company culture, get better benefits and can receive stock incentives.

Cost

Past a certain team size, per-employee EOR fees can outweigh the cost of running an entity.

Acquisitions

Acquiring a company that already has a legal entity: keep, merge or close it.

Legal exposure

A large local team can create permanent establishment risk, which calls for a proper entity.

A seamless handoff from your EOR to their entity

1

Client hires through Vensure's EOR

The team starts work right away, no entity required.

2

Cerity Global builds the entity

Setup runs in parallel, typically 2 to 3 months, up to a year by country.

3

Employees transition

Moved from EOR to the new entity with no payroll or compliance gap.

4

Cerity Global supports operations

Ongoing HR, payroll, accounting, tax and compliance.

No disruption

Your EOR keeps employees paid and compliant until the entity is live.

Client stays yours

The relationship stays with you across every other market and service.

Complementary, not competing

Vensure leads

- Client relationship and account ownership
- EOR in new markets
- Contractor management
- Payroll and recruiting

Cerity Global leads

- Entity setup and operational launch
- Local HR, payroll and benefits for the entity

- Tax and compliance

Together

- Joint scoping when a client signals entity intent
- Planned EOR-to-entity transition
- Client stays with you in all other markets

Cerity Global honours our agreement and complements Vensure as we grow together

Signals that sales team can spot

- Customer asks about an office, factory, warehouse or support center
- Client plans to build a team in one country
- EOR headcount is growing in a single country
- Questions about permanent establishment or tax exposure
- Client wants to hire directly or offer stock and richer benefits
- Customer wants a local presence to support its own clients

Hear a signal? Loop us in early.

Entity setup takes months, so early conversations give clients the smoothest path. Keep selling EOR for speed. We work alongside it.
